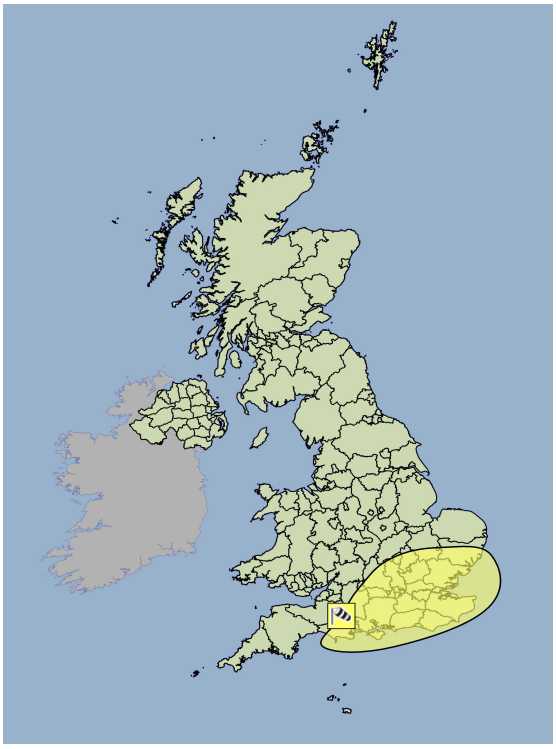
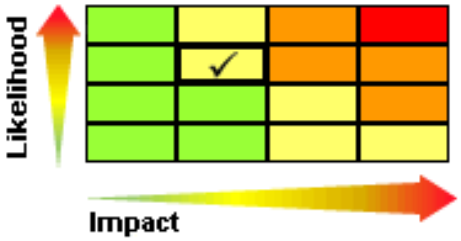
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
An active cold front will move quickly east across England today, bringing a short spell of heavy rain and squally winds to more southern and southeastern parts of England.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Wind

Valid from 10:30 on Fri, 29th May 2015 until 15:00 on Fri, 29th May 2015

A narrow band of heavy rain will be accompanied by squally winds as it moves east across southern and southeastern parts of England over the next few hours. Gusts of 50-60 mph are possible in places.

The public are advised to take extra care due to the localised squally winds and heavy rain.
